Makes internally consistent with discussion re: State plans

In the version of the preamble I have, this is on page 361 – the change is the addition of the language in all caps in the second paragraph. (The first paragraph is just there to help you find this).

VIII. State Plans
    A. Overview
        After the EPA establishes the state-specific rate-based CO2 goals in the emission guidelines, as described in Section VII above, each state must then develop, adopt, and submit its state plan under CAA section 111(d). To do so, the state must first determine the emission performance level it will include in its plan, which entails deciding whether it will adopt the rate-based CO2 goal set by the EPA or translate the rate-based goal to a mass-based goal.

        The state must then establish an emission standard or set of emission standards, along with implementing and enforcing measures AND OTHER PERMISSIBLE PLAN MEASURES, that will achieve a level of emission performance that is equal to or better than the level specified in the state plan.

Fixed typo

We expect that many states will consider the opportunities offered for their respective economies as a result of this investment.
